Farmers Need Ottawa Help Says Pearson

OTTAWA (CP)—Opposition Leader Pearson told a western farm delegation yesterday he believes in government intervention to maintain farm income.

But he gave the farmers no outright indication of whether he would fully support their demands for $300,000,000 in deficiency payments for grain. He said the Liberal party would make proposals and make its views known when the Commons debates government farm legislation.

He and other Liberal MPs and Senators met with a small segment of the 1,000 western "marchers" pressing their plea for the deficiency payments in a quiet "invasion" of Parliament Hill, talking to every MP and Senator who would listen.

'Marchers' Ready to Go Home

No Pledge to Farmers

OTTAWA (CP)—The 1,000 Prairie grain growers ended their three-day Ottawa "march" Wednesday night, preparing to board their four special trains for the journey back home.

They got sympathy and attention from all political parties, but there was no clear pledge from the government that their plea for $300,000,000 worth of grain deficiency payments would be met.

Prairie Progressive Conservative MPs tendered them a small party as a send-off. As the grain growers packed their bags in the 13 hotels where they were housed, there was talk of continuing the deficiency payments campaign by a series of letters to western MPs, following local rallies by delegates in the West.

Delegation leader Jack Wesson, president of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, told reporters he felt that in time the government would take steps to bridge the gap between the farmers' low earnings on grain and rising production costs.

That's what deficiency payments would do. However, Prime Minister Diefenbaker Tuesday reopened a number of objections to the proposal, saying the farmers' petition had not provided an answer to these objections. He said he would give the proposal the "fullest continuing consideration."

Talk Series Ends Today

Last in a series of eight talks about the Indians of British Columbia, by G. E. Mortimore of The Daily Colonist staff, will be heard at 10.15 p.m. today on radio station CBU, Vancouver.

The talks were based on a series of articles which Mr. Mortimore wrote for the Colonist under the title of "The Strangers."
